Letter from the NFEC CEO

If you watched the news during 2020, you were inundated with messages of fear, anger, violence, and division. But that was not the world we experienced.

We witnessed people who focused on helping others strengthen their finances during these uncertain times – coming together no matter their differences to empower people with the knowledge and guidance they need to foster greater financial well-being.

The NFEC addressed these difficult times with a unifying message of financial empowerment: To provide financial wellness champions with the tools, training, and resources to help their communities achieve greater financial security and work toward greater financial wellness.

No matter what happens around us, the NFEC stays the course and focuses on the core values that guide our work:

- Empowerment. We mobilize and develop community champions and empower them with the resources, knowledge, and processes they need to help their communities’ citizens work toward financial self-sufficiency and security.

- Independence. We develop high-quality, unbiased financial wellness resources in collaboration with top educators, personal finance experts, and financial professionals with the primary objective of helping people improve their financial outlooks.

- Leadership. The NFEC spearheads the financial wellness movement around the world through advocacy and raising awareness.

Several projects we completed that will continue to propel the NFEC forward: A three-year update and expansion of all 4,200 pages of educational resources, 1,700 webpages, and refinement of all our internal processes.

To show our commitment to social impact, we are now a Certified Benefits Corporation in pending status with an approval expected in Q3 of 2021. To highlight our educational value, we have started the Accreditation process with the IACET. Accreditation approval is expected in Q4 this year.

We are creating a world where people are informed to make qualified financial decisions and confidently take effective financial action that best helps them meet their basic human needs while moving toward fulfilling their personal, family, and global community goals.

Join us in the world we envision.

Educator & Coach Spotlight

Our Certified Educators and Coaches champion financial wellness by spearheading exciting, novel projects that feature our resources and products. Following are a few examples highlighting how educators took financial education to new heights in the past year.

Bola Sokunbi

Bola Sokunbi is founder of Clever Girl Finance, a financial education platform for women of all backgrounds. She and her team offer a broad scope of free personal finance education to women, including a podcast with 2.7 million plays and courses that have enrolled more than 160,000 students. Bola's mission is to match women with the financial education resources they most need, without the burden of high fees.

Ben Joergens

As Financial Empowerment Director at Old National Bank in Evansville, IN, Ben Joergens gives financial education to at-risk community members including struggling teens, parents, and the incarcerated. He spearheads an innovative program, “12 Steps to Financial Success,” which he has taught to hundreds of female inmates at a nearby rehab center. Ben has won awards for his distinguished community service. He recently branched out to develop a program titled “Money Safety for Seniors,” which has reached over 500 seniors.

Maria Riofrio

Maria Riofrio's passion and dedication to providing financial education to people from a wide range of backgrounds are evident from her service. She has taught financial wellness to teenage boys in correctional facilities and transitional homes; military personnel; subsidized housing residents; and Cambodian, Laotian, and Hmong communities around the US. As an immigrant herself, Maria draws upon her experience to make connections and build trust, teaching and coaching in both English and Spanish. She also leads the LiSA Initiative, a grassroots movement that addresses financial concerns among women and their families.
We develop high-quality, unbiased financial wellness resources in collaboration with top educators, personal finance experts, and financial professionals with the primary objective of helping people improve their financial outlooks. Founding our materials on empirical research, psychology, and educational methodologies yields resources that inform the industry and set the standards for financial wellness promotion.
Standards & Research

The most comprehensive nationwide standards for financial education and financial coaching were developed by the NFEC and a team of experts. Industry leaders rely upon these benchmarks to guide program development and implementation, financial wellness professional qualifications, and standardized communications.

Standards for Financial Wellness Professionals

- Framework for Teaching Personal Finance
- Financial Coaching Standards & Code of Conduct
- Educational Methodologies for Personal Finance Instruction

Standards to Guide Learning Outcomes

- Financial Literacy Standards & Framework for Learners (High School – Adult)
- Kids Financial Literacy Standards (PK – 8th Grade)

IACET Accreditation Process

We are finalizing the accreditation process and look forward to being an IACET-accredited provider. The IACET’s thorough, rigorous review process confirms that its accredited providers offer effective and valuable programs – the best of the best.
The NFEC spearheads the financial wellness movement around the world by conducting advocacy and raising awareness. We seek to reach our colleagues in the financial education and counseling industry, stakeholders, and the public with the latest financial wellness messaging. We take a creative and collaborative approach to financial wellness advocacy and enlist influencer support to spread the message of these campaigns as widely as possible.
Building an Army of Advocates

Our Research and Advocacy Center offers comprehensive information on three core areas essential to promoting financial wellness: identifying the problem, education about root causes, and how to participate in effective advocacy. Advocates worldwide access this center to discover how we can make a difference together.

Recognizing High-impact Individuals

Educators are the single most important influence on people’s success at achieving financial wellness. Each year we recognize individuals who have made major impact on the lives of others by promoting financial health in their communities; and select one high-impact educator to receive the coveted Financial Education Instructor of the Year award.
The NFEC has a controlling organic online presence and is the most visible financial education and coaching company online. A SEM Rush report highlights that we achieve two times the visibility of the leading comparable organization.
